 - There is no question of the national importance of WTNH's Team 8 unit's investigation of rumors of quality-control problems at the Sikorsky plant in Stratford, Conn. WTNH's three-year pursuit of the story never stalled, even though Sikorsky is among the region's largest employers. Their efforts entailed securing internal corporate documents, interviewing production employees concerned about out-sourced parts and petitioning the Department of Defense for records under the Freedom of Information Act. The investigation culminated in 2006 with Sikorsky acknowledging its problem. For enterprise and persistence in reporting and helping to safeguard U.S. military personnel, "Defective Parts on Black Hawk Helicopters" receives a Peabody Award."
